Lifesaving bedaquiline is recommended by WHO as a core agent for treating drug resistant TB (DR-TB) replacing painful, less effective and more toxic injectable drugs.

But so far it ain't no party for the more than half a million people with DR-TB who continue to suffer and die never being able to access bedaquiline because it's just too expensive.

Despite large-scale public investment in the R&D for this drug, Janssen selectively picks who can live and who can die with its tiered prices at either $440, $900, $3,000 or $30,000 for a six-month course. This while researchers estimate bedaquiline could be produced & sold profitably for between $48 and $96 for six months. We cannot wait any longer while Janssen plays its malicious games with our lives.

It is time for governments to join the party and revoke all secondary patents on bedaquiline AND issue COMPULSORY LICENSES to ensure access to multiple sources of more affordable generic bedaquiline NOW!
